

FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS PRACTICE

Financial institutions of all sizes realize that to compete in today's environment, they must offer customers advice and products that can improve quality of life. As the environment puts increasing pressure on margins, FIs are investing in technology and fee businesses to compete. At the same time, banks must maintain capital and liquidity, and navigate consumer protection rules.

Regulators and investors have never been more attentive to safety and soundness. The Dodd-Frank Act and recent Regulatory Relief Act will need to be viewed together. The CECL accounting for loan losses is the most dramatic change in bank accounting history. HoganTaylor is experienced and possesses deep industry-specific knowledge to assist with your challenges.

Accounting, tax and auditing services for financial institutions must be performed within precise deadlines and in a manner that clearly demonstrates a high degree of industry specific knowledge. Regulators and investors consider strong risk management a sign of financial institution wellness. At HoganTaylor, we understand how important our role is in helping you keep your institution on solid ground.
